CALLS SEA BATTLE 'FEELER'

MAYOR SCORES $70 VICTORY IN PAY RUMPUS

Some Salaries Boosted, Others Cut Under Proposal Made In Original Bill.

FORCES COUNCIL CAUCUS

Councilman Miller, Standing Pat On Own Ordinance, Calls Locke Changes 'Petty.'

After more than an hour of political maneuvering in a "star chamber" caucus last night, Republican members of council agreed to make increases in the city payroll proposed by Chairman Fred Miller of the salary committee but added an annual overall boost of only $70 to salaried employes which probably will be more than offset by 25-cents-a-day cut voted in day wages of engineering department employes.

Chairman Miller, only Democrat on the salary committee, moved that his ordinance, carrying changes included in a substitute ordinance drafted at a Monday night caucus called by Mayor W. J. Locke, be passed as emergency legislation, when it was read at an open council session which did not start until 9.30 p. m., instead of the usual hour of 8 p. m. Receiving a quick second from Councilman Russell Porch, member of the salary committee and chairman of the finance committee, the revised measure won unanimous passage.

Miller described as "petty" the cuts written into the ordinance by Republicans, which affected day laborers. The salary chairman refused to budge in his demands for substantial increases for policemen and firemen despite efforts of the opposition to slash his recommendations, which he said, were agreed to by Porch and member Paul Bush prior to Monday night's caucus.

The Locke group was forced into a caucus consideration of its "troubles" when Miller stood out against considering any changes in his proposed ordinance after he'd been shown a copy of the substitute authored by Locke at Monday night's rump session of Republicans.

"Any changes to be discussed, so far as I am concerned, should be considered from the floor at the open session of council," was Miller's ultimatum.

Apparently the backers of the new plan didn't want to "expose" their views before any gallery of city employes and finally the caucus was agreed to.

Placed in the embarrassing role of leadership by Locke who remained in the background last

Crestline Toll Of War Deaths Rises to Three

CRESTLINE—John Albert Harley, 20, pharmacist's mate, first class in the navy, today had become Crestline's third serviceman to die in this war.

The youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E Harley, East Bucyrus street, were informed late Tuesday that their son was killed in action in an unidentified war zone. The message said the body could not be recovered.

Finch Clemens, who was in the navy, and Emmerson Kaler of the Army Air corps, Crestline youths, previously had been reported missing in action. James Helfrich, Crestline solder, who was reported missing, is held a prisoner by the Japs, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Helfrich, were told last week.

Young Harley enlisted in the navy in April, 1941, and received his basic training at the Great Lakes Naval station He was graduated later from the Naval

Missing Radium Hunted

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — An intense search was being conducted today for a tube of radium worth $10,000 which had been used at the Cramp Shipbuilding yards to X-ray certain types of welds.

Frank Hartman, radium "detective," reported he failed to locate the metal with a delicate apparatus which detects radium within a radius of 500 yards and expressed the opinion that the metal had been removed from the yards.

Hartman warned that any person in possession of the radium was endangering his health and possibly his life.

CANNED FRUIT, VEGETABLE SALE STOPS FEB. 20

8-Day 'Freeze' Precedes Point Rationing Which Starts On March 1.

The can opener will yield to the cook book after midnight Feb. 20.

From that time until March 1, when rationing starts, there will be no canned fruits or vegetables sold.

Frozen fruits and vegetables, dried fruits (not dried vegetables), and canned soups and canned baby foods also are included in the order, issued yesterday by the office of price administrator at Washington.

With the armed forces and lend-lease taking, in some categories, half of the canned goods put up, the government has ordered rationing to assure everyone a fair share.

Fresh fruits and vegetables will not be rationed, and one of the goals of the program will be to compel people to do more real cooking and less can-opening. Home canning also will be encouraged because such goods will not be counted against ration coupons.

Rationing will be by points, 48 points per person in the month of March, regardless of age or

Beverstock, 'Father of Auto Club,' Retires After Serving 24 Years

He Plans to Raise Cattle; Berger Succeeds Him.

By ELLEN CRAMER

Frank Beverstock, who has been secretary-manager of the Richland County Automobile club almost from the time an automobile was a curiosity, is quitting—so he can "go back to the farm and raise shorthorn cattle."

The 69-year-old manager informed directors of the club that his retirement after 24 years of service would be effective March 1, in accordance with the letter he had sent Carl H Stander, president of the board, on Jan. 20.

Accepting the resignation the directors then elected Jack Berger as successor to Beverstock. Berger has served as assistant-secretary for the past 10 years.

To climax his long years of service which have earned him the name of "Father of the Auto club," Beverstock was made the firsts honorary director of the club by board members meeting for a dinner meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Not quite certain what he would do with his leisure time after serving the club for nearly a quarter of a century, Beverstock said, "I'm just going to take it easy on my farm near Lexington. Haven't anything special planned but I am going to raise shorthorn cattle And no doubt I'll get a few games of dominoes in at the Elk's club."

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Something new in "manhunts" was started today when Cleveland police began a search for a 10-pound can of cyanide.

Treasury Considers Using Old Rate to Speed Pay-As-You-Go

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The treasury disclosed today it had given serious consideration without reaching a definite conclusion, to reverting 1942 income taxes to 1941 rates and exemptions as a possible expedient to put taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Such a plan, if adopted, would relieve taxpayers with incomes of less than $10,000—and there are many millions of them—from something like half of the tax liability they now face March 15 on 1942 incomes at rates increased last year.

Earlier, Paul had asserted that outright forgiveness of 1942 income taxes, as proposed in the Ruml pay-as-you-go plan, would set off an inflation spiral "that might bring widespread demands for wage increases.

'BRANDING' OF CARS DELAYED

Kyle Says Councilmen Argee To Pass Measure After Minor Change.

City-owned autos likely will be "branded" as a result of council action at its next meeting, but ownership identification will omit the department classification of the car.

This was agreed to last night, George C. Kyle, at-large member of council said, after his resolution calling for the "branding" had been tabled on motion of Councilman James Anderson Kyle tossed his resolution into the council hopper Monday despite efforts of Republican leaders, to have him refrain from such a course.

Kyle was prompted, he said, to demand such identification of municipally-owned motor equipment after the service department auto was not available for city business two weeks ago — on a day Mayor W. J. Locke was absent from the city.

Locke had admitted that he has been using the city car, but for "official business only" because the tires of his personal car are badly worn. Since gasoline rationing started in December an ex-

NEW YORK—(INS)—A special German communique broadcast today by the Berlin radio and heard by CBS in New York admitted that "the battle for Stalingrad is over."

(By Associated Press)

The battle of Stalingrad took its place today as a possible turning point in the war as the Russians announced the collapse of the last resistance here, with 503,650 killed and captured in the greatest single military disaster in the history of German arms.

That toll since the start of the Red army's counter offensive in mid-November heavily outweighed the 330,000 total German casualties of Verdun, blood pool of the first world war.

Added to the uncounted thousands of dead who paved the way for the German thrust to the Volga late last fall, the price the Germans paid in vain probably surmounted the loss of both sides at Verdun 680,000 casualties

As the shock of the loss came home to Germany, the Rhineland thundered with a ruinous 20-minute night attack in which the RAF loosed 100 two-ton "block busters" and incendiaries by the thousands on Cologne.

LOSS HIGHER

OWI Says Merchant Marine's Casualties Are 3.200.

WASHINGTON (AP) - American merchant marine losses in dead and missing the first year of the war totaled more than 3,200—3.8 per cent of the total number of merchant sailors—compared with a rate of three-mourths of one per cent for the armed services, Elmer Davis, director of the office of war information, said today

In a statement "to clear up rumors and reports of personnel difficulties among the crews of the nation's war cargo carriers," David said America's 70,000 seamen "delivered the goods," and showed "patriotism, courage and devotion to duty."

A report by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the war shipping administration, said there was little chance of missing seamen turning up.

Knox Denies Pitched Fight In Solomons

Declares Only Preliminary Moves Now Underway After Communique Reports Increased Activity, Losses on Both Sides In South Pacific.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Navy Knox described a sea battle in progress off the Solomon islands today as "a process of feeling out on both sides," but said there is "no really pitched battle as yet."

Nobody knows yet what the immediate future holds, but any assumption in a navy communique last night that there is a major battle under way, Knox told a press conference, is incorrect.

The communique reported "increased activity on the part of the Japanese indicates a major effort to regain control of the entire Solomons area." It also asserted both United States and Japanese forces had suffered losses.

"It is not true," Knox said, "that a great big fight is going on There are a lot of preliminary dispositions and preliminary moves But there is no really pitched battle as yet."

He asserted the Japanese, in making reports of a sea battle in the Solomons area, were "on a fishing expedition," and, replying to inquiries about extent of the fighting, cited the communique and declared, "you'll have to be satisfied with that."

Knox added that in the Solomons generally, "there is a long, tough, hard fight ahead of us."

Of Guadalcanal itself, with its all-important Henderson airfield, Knox said that "we're in complete possession and control: we completely dominate the Guadalcanal area."

Told some disappointment had been expressed in Australia that he did not extend his tour of the Pacific to include a visit there, Knox replied, "I was away long enough as it was." He was away from Washington for approximately three weeks, two weeks of which time was spent touring American posts in the South Pacific.

Replying to comments in Australia that he might have been too optimistic, the secretary said he felt that after personally viewing conditions he was in a better position to judge the situation than "anonymous spokesmen" in Australia.

He told of visiting Guadalcanal and going to a command post in the jungle with Gen. Alexander Patch, commanding army troops there. From that outpost, Knox said, he saw Japanese defiles in the mountains in which Japanese troops have sought refuge. Some of them, he reported, surrendered while he was there.

"I do know we have had a number of voluntary surrenders, in excess of any before," Knox said.

Surrender On Guadalcanal When Yank Loudspeaker Offers Them Food.

(By Associated Press)

GUADALCANAL — An encouraging sign was seen here today when a number of Japanese soldiers surrendered voluntarily in response to a broadcast over a loudspeaker from the American lines.

They were the first Japanese on Guadalcanal to give themselves up without compulsion and discredit the legend that all Japanese are ready to fight until death for emperor and country.

These hungry, sick soldiers were definitely discouraged and tired of fighting. They gladly accepted American offers to give them hot cooked rice, cigarets and good treatment and came in with their hands in the air.

"I was sure I would die," one of the prisoners said through an interpreter, "There was no hope. They have promised us reinforcements and airplanes day after day, but these promises were never kept. My feelings as a true Japanese soldier were gone.

"I didn't want to be a Japanese any more I wanted to be an American. When I heard the voice from the Americans promising good food and good treatment, I came in."

This prisoner was Private Akiyoshi Hasamoto, 23, of Fukuoka in southern Japan. He said many other Japanese soldiers felt as he did about the war and expressed

Condemned Killer Says He'll Die 'Good Loser.'

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—(INS)—With less than 48 hours to live before he faces a firing squad behind the walls of the Utah State prison, Walter Robert Avery, condemned killer, today promised prison guards that he would "die a good loser."

"I've been a good loser all my life," Avery said. "I've lived a good loser, and I'll die one."

Utah is the only state in the nation that uses a firing squad, but doomed killers are given their choice of death by bullets or by the hangman's rope. Avery picked the firing squad. He was condemned for the slaying of Police Officer Holt L. Gates at Ogden, Utah, during a holdup on Feb. 11, 1941.

Mrs. Heath Granted Divorce, Third Interest In $125,000

Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston today granted a divorce to Grace Heath in her suit against Earl W. Heath, sales manager of the Fate-Root-Heath company of Plymouth, allowed her custody of their five minor children, $320 monthly for their support, and nearly a one-third interest in property holdings valued at approximately $125,000.

The decision was announced in a 13-page opinion submitted by Judge Huston who heard the case last December. The suit was filed July 16, 1940.

Included in property given Mrs. Heath is about $11,000 in property, of which the former family residence in Plymouth was a part, a $11,500 life insurance policy for her and $10,000 policy for benefit of the children and 145 shares in the Fate-Root-Heath company and Heath retained 290 one-third shares in the company.

Although retaining full ownership and control of the stock, the finding stipulated that the plaintiff should put 66 of her shares and the defendant 100 of his with a trustee as a guaranty during the minority of the children.

Selection of the trustee must be agreed upon mutually by the plaintiff and defendant, the opinion set forth, and if such agreement cannot be reached, the court will appoint a trustee. The name of John Health, an official in the company, was suggested as one qualified to act in such a capacity. The court further suggested that it might be advisable for a trustee

WMC to Ask Congress for Law To Draft Labor of All Ages

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The war manpower commission will ask congress for early action on national service legislation for all men and women so that it can force men outside the draft age to change from non-war to war industries, it was learned today.

A WMC spokesman revealed that such a measure would be a necessary "last ditch" method of coping with manpower shortages as a senate appropriations subcommittee, which is studying manpower problems, summoned selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey to explain new conscription plans.

Hershey was called originally to discuss the possible impact of draft requirements on war industries and agriculture, but subcommittee members probably will question him closely about these developments of the last 24 hours.

If you're in the service—soldier, sailor, Marine or Coast Guardsman—and have a problem regarding insurance, allotments, enlistments, status under the terms of Selective Service Law, etc., write to Beatrice Fairfax, care of this paper. If you wish your question to be kept confidential, enclose a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope and your answer will be sent to you by mail.

Beatrice Fairfax lives in Washington, and will be glad to get in touch with war and navy departments, through press liaison officers of these branches of the service, to give your problems correct answers. She will also answer questions submitted to the regular column for those who do not ask for personal replies.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is in the service and I must undergo an operation for appendicitis. I'm not employed and don't have an income. Is there some way I could get hospitalization through government regulations? Thank you.

Worried.

The American Red Cross has a "Home Service Section" which is part of every chapter throughout the country, and renders social service to service men, ex-service men and members of their families.

If your local Red Cross is unable to give you the assistance you need, write me and I will give you the address of the Area office nearest to you.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

As my fiance has enlisted in the army, I am considering joining the Women's Auxiliary Corps. What will be my pay?

Peggy

President Roosevelt signed a bill raising the base pay of the WAACs from $21 to $50 a month. This new measure gives the Women's army the same rate of pay as soldiers.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend applied for an appointment to West Point, but it will not be effective until late 1943. In the meantime, if the army drafts him (he is 20 years old) may he ask for deferment?

Tom's Girl.

While the decisions of a local draft board cannot be anticipated as theoretically the general practice to defer a West Point prospect no more than one or two months. The chances are if your boy friend is drafted in the near future, he will be processed by the Draft Board for induction into the army. June 1943 would be a long a period for such a deferment.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband enlisted in the army on the 27th of the month. When may I expect my first allowance check?

D. W. B.

Your allowance will begin to accrue on the first of the next succeeding month following the date of application, and payment will be made following the end of the month. The date of application is the date on which the soldier's application is filed with his commanding officer.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband will probably be called by the draft in a few weeks. Will he be given a furlough before he has to leave for the army?

When your husband receives his call papers after being inducted into the army, he will probably wish to settle his affairs and get given a week's furlough in order to get into shape so that he may report for duty. Originally the furlough was two weeks, but was ordered cut by the War department, effective November 1.

Unrationed Meats In Day's Menu

By BETSY NEWMAN

Liver, heart, kidneys, sweetbreads and brains are not on the rationed meats list, neither is fowl. Do you dislike the idea of some of these foods? I'm afraid it is time for us to overcome our prejudices and eat foods that are good for us—and that we can get—without being fussy. It is, of course, the home manager's job to serve all foods so that they look attractive.

Today's Menu.

Baked Heart with Dressing, or Breaded Calf's Brains, or
Creole Kidney
Scalloped Potatoes
Cauliflower Waldorf Salad
Custard Pie Coffee or Tea

Creole Kidney

4 veal kidneys or 6 lamb kidneys
6 thin slices bacon
2 small onions, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup tomato juice
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Bit of bay leaf
1 tablespoon flour

Split kidneys in halves lengthwise, remove white tubes and fat, put in cold water and let stand 30 minutes. Drain and dry well between soft cloths. Cut into half-inch slices and dredge with flour. Cut bacon in small squares and panfry a minute or two in heavy frying pan, add kidneys, onions and green pepper. Stir over low heat until meat is seared. Add tomato juice, salt, pepper and bay leaf, cover closely and simmer about 30 minutes. Lift out 2 tablespoons or more hot liquid from pan, blend with flour to make a thin paste, stir into ingredients in pan and continue cooking, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth. Serve piping hot on toast points or a mound of cooked rice. Serves 4 or 5.

Baked Heart with Dressing.

1 beef heart
Salt, pepper
2 c. bread crumbs
1 small onion
1 tsp. dried sage
1 tbsp. butter

Wash heart in cold water, remove any hard parts and rub with pepper and salt. Make dressing by adding melted butter to bread-crumbs and mixing well, add chopped onion, then sage, beaten egg and pepper and salt to taste. Fill cavity in heart and sew closed. Brown heart in oven set at 400 degrees F., then lower heat to 325 degrees, add ½ cup water, hot, and continue cooking about 3 hours, or until meat is tender. Gravy may be made from drippings in pan. Serves 6.

Breaded Calf's Brains.

1½ lb. calf's brains
2 qts. water
2 tbsps. vinegar or lemon juice
Salt, pepper. Fine bread crumbs.
1½ tbsps. butter

Thoroughly wash and clean the brains in cold water, without breaking. Heat water with lemon juice or vinegar to boiling; put in brains and simmer 20 minutes. Drain, cool and dry carefully by patting between cloths. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in fine bread crumbs. Melt butter in frying pan, put in brains and panfry to a golden brown. Serves 4.

RUFFING YOUR HONORS

Your own top cards in a suit of which the dummy has none are usually good for only one purpose obtaining discards of dummy's losers. On some hands, however, there is no way that such discards can help you. It may be better then to treat those honors as if they were little cards, by ruffing them in the dummy in order to furnish you extra entries, for taking finesses, cashing established cards of some other suit or placing the lead on some kind of finishing play.

It was pretty to see South analyze the situation correctly and make her contract plus an extra trick despite three kings being out against her. The spade J was led, nullifying one of those kings if she played automatically and discarded from dummy to let the lead run up to her major tenace. But she did no such thing. She analyzed the hand first.

Noting that both hearts and clubs might require two leads to catch those kings, that meant she should have four entries to the dummy. One of these could be by overtaking a diamond honor, another probably by using then the diamond 4 to the 7 on the fourth round, and the two others could be obtained only by ruffing the spades.

So she ruffed the spade lead in dummy, finessed the heart Q, ruffed the spade A, finessed the heart J, dropped the heart K with the A, led the diamond K and Q, then the J to the A, finessed the club Q, went to dummy again with the diamond 4 to the 7, finessed the club J and ended the hand with the club A and the last trump, thus getting all of the tricks.

The toast burns, the oatmeal boils over, the baby gets in the kitchen cabinets. When bed time comes she's all played out.

Right at that moment she must be self-indulgent, grant herself a full half hour to attend to her good looks program. The war won't last forever. She must not be included among the casualties, lose the fresh complexion, take on premature wrinkles. She must think of Daddy and the kids. They don't want the Mama to look like a grand old ruin.

All right. She'll fill the bath tub with water at a temperature of 98 degrees. Before she gets into the tub she will remove make-up with a cleansing oil, wash her face with soap suds, rinse with tepid water, dry and spread on a cold cream. The combination of oil and steam is grand for the complexion. She will tuck her hair into the shower cap, soak and rest in the bath for ten minutes.

Tired muscles will relax. The yowling nervous system will quiet down, go to sleep.

Now for a good old scrubbing, the kind dirty little boys used to get when the wash tub was dragged into the kitchen on Saturday night. Not that Mrs. Tubber is in need of such a rousing cleansing, but because the friction is good for her. It makes sluggish circulation pick up and go places. It helps the skin to function as an organ of elimination. The physical benefits of a bath are manifold.

The soap must be bland, enough used to fluff up a rich lather. A heavy brush is essential. If a wash cloth is used it should be large, of fairly rough surface. But the brush is best. No economizing on elbow grease. The idea is to scour and stimulate every inch of the body surface.

Use the spray or shower to remove the suds, first warm, then cold. Have a brisk rubdown, apply a bath tonic or talcum.

This is a good time for a quick pedicure, because the flesh is soft and small callouses are easily removed with the toilet pumice stone. The cuticle around the finger nails is in prime condition to be lifted and loosened by the orangewood stick, after which oil or ointment should be applied.

Remove the facial cream with tissues, spread on a heavier one that is to remain on all night. In the morning dash on cold water, dry the skin gently with a soft towel, and one is ready for the war paint.

Discipline Essential In Wartime

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In a certain large city, an elementary school principal told me a few weeks ago that about a dozen boys who formerly attended her school and called while on furlough to visit her and the teachers, reported to her that they had learned much since in uniform which they wished they had learned years earlier at home and school. All named discipline—learning to obey and doing many things they at the time did not feel like doing.

Increase In Delinquency

Most observers who comment on the rapid rise in juvenile delinquency in recent months, name as the chief factor in the lessening of home supervision largely because so many mothers are working; and they probably are correct.

Moreover, that child of five, 12 or 15 who had not learned to obey his mother before she worked away from home if far less likely to obey her when she does work.

Now obedience is not merely a matter of punishment. Punishment alone can drive a child to disobedience, if not done wisely by parents who also exercise great self-control and cultivate a family atmosphere of understanding, companionship and affection.

Neither can these last-named traits alone suffice. They tend, indeed, to wane, even to disappear, when the child has not learned wholesale restraints. There needs to be a balance. Restraint without love can be brutal, and love without restraints merely commits suicide.

All over the country mothers have afforded more understanding, companionship and love to the child but less restraint, as a rule, than fathers have, though there are, of course, many exceptions.

Some of these mothers, however, despite their long belief in no restraint of the children, have husbands who imposed some restraint on them. Now with so many fathers working at hours forbidding them to be with their children and so many more away from home in war industries or the armed forces, what shall we expect to happen to many of these children whose mothers trusted no spanking when they were little?

Teach Meaning of "NO"

As those who have read my writings or heard me speak during the last 20 years know, I have consistently pleaded with parents to restrain their children in the early years and to bring back the old-fashioned spanking as the means of teaching the child the meaning of NO, as the beginning of education in good character.

Mothers of very young children who see the folly of the doctrine of "no restraint" may have without cost to them my special bulletin on "Teaching Tot Meaning of NO," to be had by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Suppose your child, three years old, had a scar on the face which medical experts tell you cannot be removed with safely. How would you proceed to protect this child later from self-consciousness over the scar?

A. I would first work on myself to accept the scar as a part of the child's personality, never allowing myself to fret about it or to keep my eyes on it or to talk to other persons about it. Then I would try to induce other members of the family, relatives and close friends to accept it in like manner. Also have a very brief answer given nonchalantly to questions as to how it happened and turn the questioner's attention quickly from the matter, refusing ever to dwell on it.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

That my father was going to talk to Harry Underwood in code I knew just as soon as I heard the numbers he gave him over the phone.

"Tell me when you're ready," my father said next, and soon began to dictate a jumble of letters and figures. When that ended, he said: "I'll hold on till you are ready with the answer," and waited perhaps a minute. Then he was all attention again.

"Thank you so much," he said. "That's all I want to know. I'll be over later and explain. Good-bye." As he turned from the phone Halloran's eyes were still dark with resentment, but my father's friendly smile and his words were disarming.

"This thing is so big, Mr. Halloran," he said, "and there is so much at stake, that I can take no possible risk of the secret getting out. I had to check on your discretion with Mr. Underwood, as I know you would have checked on mine if our positions had been reversed, and he has assured me that you are one hundred per cent. That was his answer to my code questions. So I trust you will forgive me for asking about you."

Halloran Ready To Help.

"There's nothing to forgive," Halloran said cordially, "and I'm glad Mr. Underwood gave me a clean bill of health. Now, what can I do for you?"

"A great deal," my father said. "First, but in a low voice, tell me the name I kept you from uttering a few minutes ago."

Halloran's eyes twinkled.

"It sounds like a fairy story," he said, "but the photographs and bust I've been studying were those of King Georges of Trees, and of course it's natural to guess that's the name of the lad in the other room."

"You are correct," my father told him, "and now I think the first thing to do is to tell Georges what you know. He then may be able to throw some light on the reason for the study of him this other man hired you to make. If you will stay here I will have Georges come out. I shall want to listen to the conversation, and to have my daughter hear it also. Her keen anaylsis of any problem is always very helpful to me."

Has To Get Georges Ready.

"If you don't mind, sir," Halloran said, "I think I'd better go in first and fix the king up a bit before he sees you, or more especially your daughter. I don't think he'll want to come out till I've made him a bit more presentable. I give you my word to say nothing about knowing who he is."

"A very good idea," my father approved. "But be sure to impress upon him that it is vitally important for him to come out as soon as possible."

"I'll do that," Halloran said, and went into the bedroom. We heard their voices for a moment, but could not catch the words, then there was silence for fully 10 minutes. During the last five my father kept his watch in his hand and glanced at it frequently, and I knew his impatience was rapidly mounting.

Finally a knock sounded on the door, and when my father opened it Halloran, with Geogres behind him, stood in the doorway.

"I hurried as fast as I could," Halloran said apologetically, "but there was a lot to be done."

Police Hunt for Savage Slayer of Model

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

How Do You Get Those Items?

He came over to the table at the Stork club and sat down without saying anything first, without being asked. He just slid into the banquette and made himself comfortable. He was wearing lieutenant's bars on his shoulders, and the sleeve of his uniform carried the emblem of the signal corps. His voice was thick and a little combative, as though he were expecting an argument.

Kilgallen

"Do you know what you ought to write about?" he said. "Those guys on Guadalcanal. I'm not saying where I've been, but I've seen action. Plenty of action. I've been where it's hot. I know what those guys on Guadalcanal want. Do you know what they want?

He paused. His eyes remained fixed on his audience but his right hand moved toward a bottle of Scotch on the table.

"They want to come home and ride in a taxicab." He poured himself a drink in someone else's glass, a stiff one. "I know that. That's the truth. Do you know what I've just been doing? I've been riding around in a cab with my girl. That's what I'd been dreaming of doing and now I've done it and it doesn't mean a thing and now I'm in the Stork club that those guys on Guadalcanal are dreaming about and it doesn't mean a thing either. Now I'm ready to go back."

He tilted the glass high and drank half of what was in it.

"I've been bombed 270 times and I've been over the target 23 times," the lieutenant said. "Do you know what it's like to go over the target? Well, it's like this. You write yourself off the books every time you go over the target.

"That's why I rode in that taxicab tonight and that's why I'm here and that's why I'm going to marry my girl Ruth before I leave again. She doesn't know it, but I am."

He finished his drink and got up. "I'm going to marry her before I go over the target again, and then if I don't come back she'll get $5,000. She's a nice kid."

He said goodbye and turned and went back to his own table and to his girl whose name was Ruth.

The man in the creamy polo coat climbed into the taxi and told the driver where to go. A cab is a good place to talk because there is no one except the cabbie to hear what you say and if you keep your voice low he can't hear above the motor. The man in the creamy polo coat kept his voice low and said: "There's quite a gang war going on on the East Side right now. So far there have been two murders on each side, so they're even. But it'll start popping soon."

He looked out of the window. Snow was falling.

"You can make another bet that Lepke won't ever burn," the man in the polo coat said. "Because if he does two of the biggest fellows in this town will be sitting in his lap. You know who they are. And he will squeal on them as sure as we are sitting here in this hack.

"He's a funny guy, that Lepke. You know they were never able to make him squeal?

"He's saving it, I guess. If it ever gets to the night when there is only that little door between him and the chair, he'll squeal all right. You can bet on that."

The man in the creamy polo coat told the cab driver where to stop. Then he got out, and stood in the falling snow until it had started off again.

It was at a dull time of night and there was hardly anyone in the room, just a few men at the bar and a couple playing gin rummy at a wall table and a chorus girl sitting at a table with a boy in a sailor suit. That was what he looked like—not like a sailor, but like a boy in a sailor suit.

He was thin with dark curly hair and smooth cheeks and he didn't touch the full glass of beer in front of him, he just kept talking to the girl, and listening to her. She was in costume for the floor show, a short pink costume with a little French feathered hat over one eye.

She was a small blond and she looked Broadwayish but she wasn't. The proprietor said she was from Kansas City or Tulsa or some place like that and had never been anywhere.

"That sailor kid with her, though—he's been in four engagements," the proprietor said. "See those ribbons on his blouse? The last one's for Africa."

He looked over again to where the boy was sitting with the girl in the pink costume.

"He's 16 years old," he said.

People always ask where do you get those items. It's easy. You just listen to people.

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Somebody out at Republic had a revolutionary idea. They'd make a series of pictures without a singing cowboy, by cracky. They'd make 'em with a singing cowgirl.

When I heard that, I got on my hoss and went jingle-jangle-jingle over the pass to see. That's how come I'm reporting today on Miss Anne Jeffreys, a North Carolina girl who always wanted to sing in opera and has made the grade — in the hoss variety.

Coons

"It's a start," she said, "even if it's horse opera. If I make enough money in pictures, I'm going to take five years off and study and work like mad, and try for the Met. You don't have to be so young to sing opera. You can even be 35." (Huh?)

It was disappointing, sort of, that Miss Anne the Singing Cowgirl wasn't togged out in her ridin'-and-shootin' outfit. She's a beautiful blond, blue-eyed, and looked more like a glammer-gal than a prairie flower. She had on a fancy green dress and a fur jacket, and wore gold earrings, gold bracelet, gold wrist-watch and a finger ring with a stone an inch square.

"But I can really ride," she said, justifying her new western role. "Back home I had a pony as a child, and out here I love to ride horseback. What I'm 'fraid of is I won't get to ride a horse at all. I was always a tom-boy, and I always was Tom Mix when we kids played cowboys at home."

Miss Anne, who is very, very Suthern, hails from Goldsboro where her grandfather had a big colonial home and very strong ideas about nice Suthern girls being in the theater. That was why, Anne says, her own mother who wanted to sing in opera gave up the idea—but not for Anne. "Mamma's been behind me all the way," she says, "and my grandfather must have changed his mind about the theater because at 86, he went to see his first movie because I was in it."

Anne's first movie was "I Married an Angel." She was one of Nelson Eddy's five sweethearts in the picture—one of the twin sisters.

Just turned 20, Anne has been singing since she was one year old, was on the air at 10, and left high school for New York to study for opera. She won a scholarship with the Municipal Opera association and sang the lead roles in "La Traviata" and "La Boheme," and Nedda in "Pagliacci." But musical training was expensive, and she became a Powers model to finance it. Before long she was going so well as a model that time for music was lacking, and she decided the two didn't mix. That was when she and her mother boarded a bus for Hollywood.

WOULD RELAX WOMAN-CHILD WORKING RULES

Bill Proposed In House to Lengthen Work Week, Lower Age Limit.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Legislation proposing relaxation of working conditions for women and children for the duration has been introduced in the state house of representatives by Rep. Walter L. Tarr, R., Hamilton.

The bill, believed to follow recommendations of Governor Bricker's administration, though not an "administration bill," would suspend present regulations governing types of work in which women may be employed, the hours and conditions of their work, and substitute new less strict regulations for the duration.

The governor would proclaim the end of the emergency after the war and re-instate present standards.

Women would be permitted to work 54 hours a week instead of 48 and 10 hours a day, instead of eight, for a six-day week. No restrictions of the act would apply to agricultural field work, domestic service in private homes, communications or railroads, executive positions if the women were 21 years old, or professions such as nursing.

Nor would the restrictions apply in case of fire, flood, war or other major catastrophes.

Work previously denied women, but now opened to them, would include crossing watchmen or section hand; express, taxi, jitney or general trucking driver; blast furnace, smelter, shoeshine parlor; bowling alley; automobile or wagon delivery service; baggage or freight handling; and jobs requiring lifting objects weighing over 25 pounds.

Minimum age for work open to children would become 16 years for both boys and girls instead of 18 for boys, 21 for girls, minors would not work more than six days, 48 hours a week, or more than eight hours a day.

No girl under 18 years old could be employed in an inherently dangerous occupation and no children under 18 could work in 16 listed hazardous occupations.

ASKS RESEARCH ON IRON ORE

Expert Says Hundreds Of Steel Plants Face Closing.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Hundreds of steel plants from Chicago to Pittsburgh will be closed eventually unless methods are developed to treat the billions of tons of low-grade iron ore deposits in the Lake Superior region, a metallurgical expert declared today.

"The best brains in the country should be thinking and working on this problem of its tremendous importance to the whole standard of living of the central United States," said Kenneth H. Donaldson, head of Case School of Applied Science's department of metallurgical engineering.

The Lake Superior ranges produce five-sixths of the nation's iron ore. Looking at estimates from some sources that the region's rich ores would be exhausted late in the 1950s, Donaldson said.

'STRANGLED' DOLL FOUND IN ROOM NEAR BODY OF DEAD CHILD

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Police today turned to psychology in an attempt to uncover a motive for the strangulation of 29-month-old Gail Marie Bradner, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bradner of residential Mount Auburn.

Major John Seebohm said a similarly "strangled" doll was discovered on a kitchen chair in the room adjacent to the one where police found the garroted body of the blonde, blue-eyed child. The doll was blonde, as was the victim, and the noose around the child's neck was similar to that used in the slaying of the child.

The baby was strangled with a piece of belt torn from her own dress.

Miss Anna Marie Teal, 31, charged with the slaying, waived examination today, and was held without bond for grand jury investigation, after spending the night in the psychopathic ward of General hospital. A former mental patient in General hospital, Miss Teal solemnly walked into central police station yesterday and said "I have killed a child at 35 Glencoe place."

Detective Chief Emmett D. Kugan said Miss Teal was confined to the hospital from July 23 to Sept. 2, 1942, a victim of dementia praecox, a form of insanity.

Police said Miss Teal told them she went to the apartment of her sister, Alice Good, early yesterday. During Miss Good's absence, Mrs. Bradner, who occupied the upstairs apartment, placed Gail in Miss Teal's charge, as she had done on many previous occasions.

Mrs. Bradner departed for her first day of work as a waitress, a job she had taken to help meet doctor and hospital bills incurred when the whole family was ill recently, Kugan said.

Miss Teal accompanied police to the scene but refused to enter the room in which the child's body lay.

INSUFFICIENT?

Fisher Doubts That 250,000 Cases of Liquor Will Be Enough.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Thirsty Ohioans today could look forward to about 250,000 cases of liquor during February, about the same amount as in February 1942, but Acting Liquor Director Don Fisher pointed out that, "we probably could sell twice that amount if we had it."

"February consignments will hardly keep pace with the demand," Fisher said. "Domestic whiskies are being sold about as rapidly as trucks deliver them."

Laff-a-Day

"O. K.; 48 hours shore-leave and stay out of trouble!"

One of Mansfield's happiest women today was Mrs. James Whyte, 98 South Foster street, because of a telephone call she received Monday night from her son, Robert, USN, now stationed at Pearl Harbor. The occasion was her birthday, and the call came as a complete surprise. Robert, who is 20, joined the navy in October, 1941, and was last home on Christmas, 1941. He was a metalsmith at Westinghouse before going into the service. Mr. and Mrs. Whyte have three daughters, but Robert is their only son.

On several occasions, Mrs. Smith said, milk bottles had been broken, packages of meat eaten and other articles mutilated after a delivery-man would leave them at her home while she was absent, engaged in war work. Advised of his dog's misdeeds, Hall gladly compensated Mrs. Smith and chained up the animal.

Frequently a policeman speaks well of some person who runs afoul of the law—rarely does an "affidavit" tally to the defense of a policeman, especially after he's been shot and cited to appear in court when he's able to leave the hospital. Eugene Sutter, 500 Lily street, making a statement to Detectives Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp from his bed in General hospital yesterday, said "I hope I haven't caused Officer William Colby any trouble." Sutter said he ran early Sunday after Colby had taken him into custody for investigation and cried "Start shooting, Copper." According to Sutter's statement he heard Colby challenge him with a "halt" command three times, heard his warning shot and he attaches no blame for Colby having shot him in the left knee.

BODY FOUND IN FLAMING APARTMENT

Police Say Former Friend of Racketeer Was Beaten Before Fire Started.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—Police sought today the slayer of a beautiful, auburn-haired photographer's model whose battered and slashed body was found in her flame-swept apartment by firemen who broke in the door.

The victim was Miss Estelle Evelyn Carey, 34, former friend of Nick Circella, alias Nick Dean, gangster and labor racketeer now serving an eight-year term in federal prison for conspiracy to extort more than a million dollars from motion picture executives.

The murderer had beaten the young woman savagely, slashed her throat and then had attempted to burn her body by setting a fire in the apartment. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

In spite of the terrific beating, Dr. Thomas A. Carter, coroner's physician, said death evidently was caused not by these injuries, but by the flames and smoke fumes inhaled while she lay unconscious on the floor.

When the body was found it was clad in a light housecoat, flimsy underwear, shoes and stockings. The garments had been consumed by the fire up to the waist.

Dr. Carter said he was convinced the injuries could have been inflicted only by some person in an insane rage.

Detectives reported Miss Carey had been known for years as "Nick Dean's girl," but that she had other admirers—all of them wealthy. Acquaintances described her as "mad about furs, jewelry and money."

Police Capt. John P. Ryan said Dean, a former Al Capone henchman, met Miss Carey about 11 years ago, when she was a waitress, was struck by her beauty, and installed her as a 26 dice game girl in the Colony club which he and Henry "Sonny" Goldstone operated.

Police said they would question Goldstone to determine if he knew anyone who might have a motive for killing the girl.

They also questioned Earl M. Weymer, head of an ornamental iron construction company, in whose divorce case Miss Carey's name figured several years ago.

She was questioned by federal agents prior to the indictment of Dean on the extortion charge and, according to Capt. Ryan, "his friends have not liked her since." Police were ordered to pick up former Capone gang members for questioning.

Propose Bills to Terminate 'Hasty Marriage' Marts

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Legislation to stop quick "marriage marts," currently an issue in the Cleveland area, today was before the state house of representatives in bills introduced by Reps. George B. Marshall, Franklin, Kenneth S. Nash, Cuyahoga, Craig D. Slagle, Gallia, all Republicans.

A bill jointly introduced by Marshall and Nash would tighten marriage requirements by requiring 30 days of residence in the county by either party, and would abolish any waiver of the five-day waiting period in application for licenses, except where one of the parties is serving in the armed forces.

The bill also would prohibit probate judges from selling certificates in addition to the marriage license required by law, or of making any surplus charges beyond those specified in the law for issuance of marriage licenses.

Neither bill interfered with present requirements for premarital physical examinations.

PLAN $52,000 STREET PROJECT FOR ASHLAND

Council Asks State to Help With Improvement of 3 Thoroughfares.

ASHLAND — If the state highway department approves the proposal, the city of Ashland will co-operate with the highway department in the improvement of three streets through which state highways run, the city to pay one-third of the cost which is estimated at $52,000.

City council has passed resolutions proposing the ipmrovements of Claremont avenue, Sandusky street and Cottage street. A short section of Claremont avenue nearest the city limits on U. S. Route 42 was improved two years ago by the state highway department in co-operation with the city.

The heavy truck traffic which goes over this busy route is said to have caused the need for the further improvement at this time.

Capital Chalks Up 9 Straight

Undefeated Lutherans Boost League Margin.

(By Associated Press)

CAPITAL University's Lutherans, the only undefeated team in Ohio collegiate cage circles, chalked up their ninth straight victory last night to increase their lead in the race for state-wide cage honors.

The Lutherans' ninth triumph against all competition and their seventh against Ohio conference foes came at the expense of neighboring Otterbein at Westerville. Cap finished strong to take a 50-40 decision in a rough and tumble tilt that saw two players on each squad ejected for too many personal fouls.

The Lutherans' next opponent, Ohio Northern, tuned up for their Saturday night encounter with the pace-setters by edging Findlay 72 to 68 at Findlay in one of four other contests on last night's cage program.

Warren Widner, Ohio Northern forward, flipped in 26 points for the evening's best scoring record.

Bowling Green's Falcons bowled over Baldwin Wallace's 52 to 42 at Bowling Green for the Falcons' 16th triumph in 19 starts. Wyndol Gray, Bee-Gee forward who is leading the Buckeye scoring parade, dumped in 24 points.

John Carroll's marksmenship from the free throw line staked them to a 47-45 win at Oberlin. The Carroll cagers were outscored 20 to 16 from the field but cashed in on 15 of 21 free tosses to Omerlin's five out of 12.

Mount Union's Purple Raiders captured their seventh game in nine starts by thumping Hiram 68 to 34 at Alliance.

Alliance won its eighth game in 11 efforts, a 63-51 triumph over Hillsdale on the Michigan school's own court.

Bowling Delivery

(AP Features)

Upon delivering the ball, the uppermost thought in the mind of a good bowler is to "get the ball out on the alley." The bowler should place the ball on the alley well over the foul line, attempting to roll the ball onto the alley, rather than pitching it through the air. Note the position of the right hand in this deliver. A ball thus delivered tends to take a natural hook to the left as it approaches the pins.

Church Cagers Get 73 Points

St. John's Have Field Day; Lutherans Win.

St John's cagers treated themselves to a field day in the senior Church league at the Y. M. C. A. gym last night, swamping St. Matthew's 73-17.

Robertson led the onslaught with 21 points while Nikolaus racked up 17, Schneider 15 and Eichler 14

Best game of the night saw Lutherans edge Central Methodists 35-31 in a see-saw battle. Lutherans gained a 9-8 edge at the quarter, but Methodists took the lead at 18-15 at the half. Methodists were held to two points in the third period as Lutherans drove out in front 31-20, and then Lutherans tallied only four points in the final stanza.

Smaltz of Methodists got 14 points, and Poole hooped 13 for the Lutherans.

Decisive victories marked the other two games as St. Luke's defeated Episcopalians 28-16, and Grace Gospel romped over Baptists 38-22.

STOCK MARKET PRICES TAKE SLIGHT SLIP

Power Production Sets New Record; Registration of Securities Drop.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market prices showed slipping tendencies today although there were a few hesitant moves toward higher ground.

Among backsliders at the opening were Southern Railway, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Glenn Martin and Deere Co. Up a shade were General Electric, American Telephone and International Nickel.

Followers of utilities shares noted the Edison Electric Institute report that power production set a record high last week.

Of interest in boardrooms was the Securities and Exchange Commission report that registrations during 1942 were the smallest since 1935 at $836,923,000.

AUTO CLUB HEAD RESIGNS POST

Beverstock Retires After Serving As Secretary-Manager 24 Years.

the Auto club Aug. 10, 1919. Beverstock helped build its membership from 340 to the present membership of 2,329. At that time, the organization was located in the Vonhof hotel on North Main street, moving three years later to North Diamond street and then in 1929 to its present location at 66 North Mulberry street.

The club was organized in 1917 to promote better road building, Beverstock said, but since the state highway department has taken over that end of it "our aim has been toward individual service." In 1926 emergency road service was included in memberships and since then insurance, bail bond and notary service has been made available to members.

One thing of which Beverstock is proud is the exclusive right to sale of license plates and drivers' licenses which the club has had since its beginning.

"In most cities of this size two or three other deputy stations are set up to handle the sales but our quarters and management have been so agreeable that no objections have been made and no requests for other stations during rush periods," the secretary stated.

Club membership has not fallen off greatly, despite the war. Only 54 motorists failed to renew their club rights last November, Beverstock said. The largest enrollment was in 1927 when 2,600 persons were listed on the books and in the panic year of 1932 the number dropped to less than 1,000.

Among the other services organized under Beverstock was the school boy patrol formed in 1925 when Frend C. Boals, now city traffic commissioner, was a mounted police officer for the Auto club. Atty. George H. Bleecker was first secretary of the organization and when Beverstock took over in 1919 he succeeded Earl Pollock, the third secretary.

Before assuming this position which has been almost a life-time work, Beverstock was manager of the Grand Theater, the company which built the Majestic theater. He has always been a resident of this vicinity and at present lives on a farm near Lexington.

Rabaul Pounded In Heavy New Attack

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—(INS)—The main Japanese base in the Southwest Pacific at Rabaul, New Britain Island, was subjected to a fourth successive raid by heavy Allied bombers in a predawn attack, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

The attack was concentrated on the Vunakanau airdrome where a heavy weight of bombs was unloaded and the Allied fliers strafed the aera with machine-gun fire.

"But results could not be observed because of the haze of searchlights," communique said.

A force of heavy bombers meanwhile attacked three Jap power launches filled with troops at Open Bay. Their bombs and machine-gun fire caused "substantial casualties" among the enemy troops.

Two cargo vessels attacked in previous raids on Open Bay were seen beached on the shore.

CALLS PACIFIC SEA CONFLICT JUST 'FEELER'

Knox Denies Pitched Battle In Solomons As Report Stirs Speculation.

"The groups surrounded by American troops are in a hopeless situation and can't get supplies through." A number of the groups, he said, were being "starved into surrender."

The outcome of the sea-air fighting, which may mark the crucial point in a long struggle for control of the South Pacific archipelago, remained in doubt here but the navy said both sides had suffered losses.

In a communique late yesterday the navy explained details were withheld because their disclosure at this time would affect adversely future operations in the area.

A navy spokesman asserted, however, that Japanese claims of having sunk two battleships and three cruisers and of having damaged another battleship and cruiser were "grossly exaggerated." At the same time he described as an understatement the Japs' claim of having lost only 10 planes.

While the limits of the battle zone were not clearly defined, the navy said the extent and fury of the Japanese actions indicated a concerted new effort to regain control of the southeast Solomons. A Tokyo report broadcast Monday fixed the scene of one action as the vicinity of Rennell island, about 100 miles south of Guadalcanal.

Reports from Australia indicated Gen. Douglas MacArthur's planes were taking part in the battle by raiding enemy bases on New Britain island.

Until the direction of the Japanese moves becomes more definitely known, authorities said, their immediate strategy cannot be determined. Their general purpose undoubtedly is to maneuver defending American forces into such positions that heavy reinforcements can be delivered to their beleaguered troops on Guadalcanal.

The latest battle is the seventh of the Solomons campaign, which began with American invasion of the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area Aug. 7. Of the previous six, however, only three involved forces proportionate in size to the indicated strength of the fleets now engaged.

The three largest previous battles were one fought considerably eastward of the Solomons Aug. 23-25; the battle of Santa Cruz island, Oct. 26, and the battle of Guadalcanal, Nov. 13-15.

The American high command has felt certain all along that sooner or later a new enemy offensive would be launched, and Secretary Knox made it clear late in November that American plans were being made accordingly.

Authorities said today a considerable naval force undoubtedly had been concentrated in readiness for the thrust the Japs now have made.

A factor offsetting any numerical advantage the Japs might have in plane carriers is American possession of the base on Guadalcanal which in the circumstances, becomes a sort of "unsinkable" carrier.

The nearest Japanese land bases are in the Munda area of the central Solomons, about 190 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

FBI SEIZES 2

Friend of Hitler, Woman Held In Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today the arrests of Gottfried Karl Hein, 39, San Francisco bund leader and personal friend of Adolf Hitler, and his companion, Augusta Katherine Clauss, 31.

Hein was arrested on an indictment charging him with evasion of the selective service act. Miss Clauss was accused of violating the enemy alien act, in a presidential warrant.

The FBI said Hein and Miss Clauss had been living together as Fred and Lydia Chaine. Hein, a German-born chemist, is naturalized, but Miss Clauss is an alien.

RAF Pours 'Block Busters' On Rhine City As Nazis Lose Half Million.

laid waste last May in one of the British 1,000-plane attacks.

The pace of battle in Tunisia continued to quicken with German attacks repulsed and the Allies turning more strongly to the offensive.

Allied bombers battered anew yesterday at the Axis supply port of Sfax, while little change developed in the land fighting, an Allied communique announced.

The French had reported repulse of German troops in the hills east of Gusseltia, 52 miles west of Sousse, and said the Germans had abandoned their attacks beyond Faid Pass after suffering heavy losses.

The German radio said British troops broke into Axis positions in the central sector of the Tunisian front, but reported the gap closed by a counter-attack.

A Cairo communique announced the occupation of Zelten, 15 miles west of Zuara, and said the Eighth army was in contact with retreating Axis forces between Zelten and the frontier, less than 20 miles to the west.

Huge fires were left blazing in the heart of Cologne, where the British said the Germans had worked feverishly to restore war production, particularly for U-boat parts and equipment.

An authoritative statement said "last night's attack should have valuable results" in interruption of the repairs.

Probably 100 of the RAF's heaviest bombers made the concentrated raid, and five were listed as lost.

Scattered German planes struck back by daylight, racing in over southeast England at rooftop level and causing numerous casualties.

One shopping center was hit and many persons were trapped in the ruins.

The Russian high command announced the end of the 162-day siege of Stalingrad in a triumphant special communique which said the last of the Germans surrendered at 4 p. m. yesterday.

The German radio broadcast an epitaph for its Sixth army, which Adolf Hitler hurled at Stalingrad at the prompting of his intuition—and left there as the price of his pride.

The Berlin broadcast said the last radio message from the remnant of the Sixth army signed off with "Heil Germany, heil our Fuehrer."

The German people were offered this dubious consolation: The Nazi claim that the victory cost the Russians 300,000 dead.

The cleanup freed powerful Red army forces to reinforce the drive before which Axis troops still were reeling back foward Krasnodar and the Black sea, Rostov at the gateway to the Caucasus, and the southern front bastions of Kharkov and Kursk.

The Russian mid-day communique announced recapture of 16 more towns in the tightening arc around Rostov and five more west of Voronezh.

Caught between twin offensives, a German force of perhaps a quarter of a million men withdrew in what the Germans admitted was a steady retreat—either toward the dwindling corridor of land escape at Rostov or toward the narrow strait of Kerch for escape to the Crimea.

Ambassador Used Hunter's Disguise

ANKARA, Turkey — (Delayed) (AP) — Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British ambassador to Turkey, went to the meeting of Prime Minister Churchill and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey Saturday disguised as a hunter, it was disclosed today.

The ambassador and his party took shotguns and hunting kits to confuse any Axis agents who might have been lurking about.

Knatchbull-Hugessen, on his return from the Adana conference, said today Turkey was not "asked to enter the war" and German propaganda to this effect was a "complete fabrication." The object of the conference, he said, was "to provide Turkey with more defensive armaments against the uncertainties of the future."

"Turkey remains as free to make her own decisions as before," he declared.

WMC SEEKS LAW TO DRAFT LABOR

Will Ask Legislation That Covers Men and Women of All Ages.

congress that such plans had been dropped. But the WMC spokesman said such a law is needed now.

The spokesman said that the WMC's virtual "work-in-war-activity-or-fight" edict provides no leverage to force men beyond the draft age to shift from non-war to war work. Thus, he added, the government appears to have no recourse except legislation to compel workers 38 and older to transfer from non-essential work.

There was no hint when the proposal will be submitted to congress where it is almost certain to run into strong opposition from organized labor and many groups in congress.

The WMC's order which partially lifts the ban on the drafting of fathers—those in some non-essential industries—meanwhile was hailed in congressional quarters as the beginning of a new drive to replenish the supply of labor in farms and factories.

But in the house there will be a rival of bills to prevent the drafting of any fathers in a state until that state's supply of childless married men and single men has been exhausted.

Congressional leaders were slow to comment on McNutt's "10 out of 14" announcement, which some took to mean that the army and navy had expanded their estimated personnel requirements from about 10,200,000 to more than 15,000,000 men. Many said that they did not want to criticize or applaud until they have further information which is being garnered by investigating committees.

100,000 Ohioans Face 'War Jobs or Fight'

COLUMBUS — (AP) — At least 100,000 Ohioans must obtain war jobs or face induction under the war manpower commission's order lifting general draft deferments, statistics of the U. S. employment service showed today.

were not available, reports indicated the total might reach 200,000.

William Papier, uses statistician, said persons eligible for unemployment compensation in 1941 in three occupations affected most by the WMC order totaled 1,019,135 in non-war manufacturing; 395,670 in the retail and wholesale trade, and 101,349 in personal service jobs. The 1942 ratio between those fields was about the same as the previous year, except for some increases in manufacturing, Papier said.

It was indicated that 100,000 would be affected by the WMC order on the basis of a 5 per cent turnover in manufacturing, 10 per cent in trade and 12 per cent in the service classification.

"They argued that the resolution would be 'bad for the party'," Kyle said.

Kyle last night gave the resolution to City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner, who was instructed to draft a new one eliminating "———— Department." Kyle said members of council, during the caucus, agreed to pass the revised resolution at their next open meeting.

Prepares Nation For News of Cut In Arms Output

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson today prepared the nation for news that the armament production record for January will not be as good as in December, which showed a 14 per cent increase over production in November.

He revealed in the seventh of a series of monthly reports that aircraft production in December was up 20 per cent; ground ordnance, 25 per cent; navy and army vessels, one per cent; merchant ships nine per cent, and miscellaneous munitions, 11 per cent.

That record, he said, was partly the result of a year-end drive to clear up odds and ends in many shops.

And, he warned, each increase in monthly production from now on will be harder to obtain. But he reaffirmed the government's determination to maintain an average monthly rate of production in 1943 of about 50 per cent higher than the average for the last three months of 1942.

plans for the campaign. "Unless every person co-operates," he added, "we may see a ban on pleasure driving such as the east recently experienced."

Delbert L. Pugh of Columbus, chief of war services for the Ohio State Council of Civilian Defense, will address the workers, totalling 500 in city and township, as will Harry E. Neal, chief engineer of the state department of highways and executive secretary of the Ohio War Transportation committee, Neal's assistant, Fred Tarbox, will also attend the meeting.

House to house registration for the "share-a-ride" campaign will begin Monday, Feb. 8, Bourland said, and all efforts will be made to complete the canvass within two weeks. As soon as the initial campaign is completed a second, dealing with the point rationing program, will be launched.

The state highway representative said that a recent survey indicated that the majority of Mansfield drivers outside the war plants were not taking advantage of the opportunity to help the war effort by full participation in the ride-sharing program.

Based on reports from 13 war plants in the Greater Mansfield area made by the Ohio War Transportation committee under the direction of Neal, the average passengers per car stands at 1.26, a lower percentage than in a majority of Ohio cities.

FEARS SPIRAL

Official Says Ruml Plan Would Set Off Inflation.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Randolph Paul, treasury general counsel, predicted today outright forgiveness of 1942 income taxes, as proposed in the Ruml plan, would set off an inflation spiral that might bring about widespread demands for wage increases.

On the other hand, he told the house ways and means committee, a pay-as-you-go plan, with a withholding tax of about 19 per cent on income (after deductions), would provide a safeguard against inflation, contributing to stabilization of wartime wages.

While opposing any outright forgiveness of all 1942 income taxes in attaining a current payment basis, the treasury official indicated the administration might support skipping of 1942 taxes in the lower bracket.

MAYOR SCORES $70 VICTORY IN PAY RUMPUS

Some Salaries Boosted, Others Cut Under Proposal Made In Original Bill.

night, Councilman Porch led the "star chamber" caucus of the whole council for more than an hour and further pay boost delay was indicated until Councilman C. N. Shultz "took the ball" and turned on speed.

In their earnestness to "knife" Miller, dominant Republican faction of council cut some of their own party wheel-horses while placating others—notably in the latter category being the two colored janitors of City Hall and Lloyd Kochenderfer, parking meter collector-inspector.

During yesterday afternoon "pressure groups" visited Miller in behalf of the substitute ordinance which was apparently drawn up Monday night at a Locke-led caucus of Republican councilmen.

A recapitulation of the raises voted in the ordinance as it passed showed them to total about $490 annually, for salaried city employes, above the figures established in the original measure. However, reductions of $420 from Miller's figures were also made, so that the net increase per year over Miller's committee proposals are about $70.

Because of the variation in seasonal employment of day rate workers, the change there could not be accurately compiled.

In the Miller ordinance the salary of the engineer was raised from $2,780 to $2,840 but after the log-rolling was over last night this was cut to $2,820, an increase of only $40 a year, while the pay of the sanitary sewer plant superintendent, after the Republican jockeying, rested at the 1942 level of $2,820, although Miller had recommended an increase to $2,940.

In the police department the Locke followers attempted to slash $5 off the monthly increase provided for captains and $2.50 off the proposed pay of lieutenants and $5 off the proposed increases for detectives. In the caucus voting the police chief lost $5 of a proposed $15 increase and will receive $220 a month. Captains and detectives will get $200 as proposed by Miller, and lieutenants $185 also as set up by Miller. The only cut to succeed was suffered by the finger print expert who gets a $10 raise to $195 instead of a $15 boost.

First-class patrolmen were raised from $160 to $175, second-class men from $135 to $150 and third-class or first-year men from $120 to $140. The clerk-stenographer was raised from $85, to $95.

An alowance of $10 monthly transportation expense was taken from the traffic commissioner whose salary goes from $175 to $200 while two patrolmen assigned to special investigations during the national emergency will receive $25 monthly expense for use of their own cars rather than police cruisers in conducting special examinations.

Kochenderfer is raised from $135 to $155, though Locke reportedly had urged that this post be placed on the same footing as first-class patrolman, $175.

In the fire department increases correspond to those granted police. Large groups of firemen and policemen attended last night's session.

In the waterworks division the Republicans added 2½ cents to the 70-cents an hour proposal for pumpmen. In the garbage department the superintendent proposed $10 salary boost was cut in the caucus to $5 a month. The pay of an electrician recently appointed by Locke under waterworks supervision was boosted from $660 a year to $750.

Rodmen, chainmen, assistant engineers and a junior engineer were cut 25 cents a day by the revisionists. In the recently created salvage department, Miller recommended $150 for two employes but this was reduced to $140 in the approved ordinance.

Pay of janitors at the city hall had been raised $5 to $115 a month by the Miller ordinance but in the substitute protocol they'll get $120, construed by Democratic members of council to be a Republican bid for the votes of the two janitors' congregational votes. They're preachers.

While the Miller plan called for $500 annual salary for a part-time investigator of indigent applications and $120 car allowance, the caucus raised the salary to $600. The prosopal of $190 a month for the city electrician was cut $5. Pay of the telephonist-stenographer in City Hall was boosted $10 a month.

In the supervisory section Charles Hebel, street commissioner, came out of the huddles with an increase of $10 a month to $2,280 a year.

Chairman Miller explained that salary adjustments for employes of the city health and park departments and the Humane society will be adjusted by the boards having jurisdiction, council to be asked to appropriate additional funds if necessary to the respective departments.

Other business last night provided for the purchase of 500 gallons of paint for the traffic department, payment of $501.19 as the cost of new waterworks department machinery, purchase of a new auto for the health commissioner and purchase of utility poles on Rowland avenue and North Diamond street.

A resolution was adopted abolishing auto parking on the south side of Longview avenue between Bowman and Main streets because of the operation of war industries in that area.

FIGHT TO SPEED CHANGE IN TIME

Ohio Representatives Battle to Get Quick Action As Senate Votes Delay.

bill enactment, or some time in May.

Proponents of the proposal to remove the state from Eastern War Time to the hour-slower Eastern Standard Time were confident that the house would restore to it the emergency clause necessary to put the change into effect immediately.

Then the house likely will press the senate to approve the amendment. Senate time-change advocates need only two more votes to accomplish this.

The emergency clause was stricken out yesterday when it received only 20 votes to 10 against. Twenty-two favorable votes are required. Later the bill was approved, 22 to 8, with Majority Leader Frank E. Whittemore among the opponents. His home city, Akron, generally favors the present time.

A proposed amendment to give Ohio the hour-faster war time between April and November was voted down.

Before acting on the time issue the senate passed and sent to the house a bill creating a commission and giving it $145,600 with which to purchase new sites for the state schools for the blind and deaf.

Rep. Earl W. French (R-Delaware) introduced a bill to define the state's labor policy and set up a three-member employment relations board. It would require a four-fifth favorable vote of employes to establish a closed shop, require 20 days' notice before calling a strike, and limit union initiation fees to $5 and monthly dues to $3.

Here's How Senate Voted on Time Change

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Following is the way the Ohio senate voted on the time-change bill, which passed but not as an emergency measure:

For the bill (22): Republicans: Adams, Addison, Baker, Burke, Corlett, Cramer, Daniels, Gray, Griffith, Hildebrand, Jones of Meigs, Liggitt, McKie, Mechem, Nickels, Pollock, Reiners, Rogers, Ross, Seibert, Stephenson, Walcutt.

Against the bill (8): Republicans: Whittemore, (majority floor leader), Sheppard, Bubna, and Jones of Portage. Democrats, Bartunek, Boyd, Day, and Mahoney.

All votes against the time change were cast by Cleveland and Akron senators with the exception of the vote of Sen. Jones of Portage county.

Says Time Change Will Hit War Output

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, said today any change in the present war time, or daylight saving, statute "would result in serious detriment to war production," and that enactment of state legislation to change war time "would have the same detrimental effect."

CANNED FRUIT, VEGETABLE SALE STOPS FEB. 20

8-Day 'Freeze' Precedes Point Rationing Which Starts On March 1.

occupation. Because there still will be so many unrationed foods—especially fresh fruits and vegetables—there will be no disinction, as there is in Europe, between persons who do light work and heavy work. Since canned baby foods also are on the list, babies will get the same ration points as their elders. Ill persons requiring special diets will be able to get them on medical certificates.

Restaurants and other public places will be limited on canned goods but under present plans, will not collect ration coupons from their customers—leaving all ration points to be spent for home cooking.

To housewives, one big problem will be that of planning a month ahead. For instance, at 48 points per person, a family of three will have 144 points to spend in March.

Each can, bottle or package on the new ration list will have a "point value"—perhaps 10 points for a medium size can of peas, 7 points for a can of spinach, 8 points for a half-pound package of raisins, etc. These figures are only examples. The real list of values won't be made public until after Feb. 20, to prevent anyone from hoarding the items which will be most expensive in point values.

When she learns these values, the housewife will be advised to figure out how she wants to spend her points for the family. Just as she shops for economical foods on a money basis, she will be expected to spend her points so that they go farthest in satisfying both the nutrition and taste needs of her family.

The first task of all householders will be to inventory their pantries as of midnight Feb. 20.

OPA advised this procedure: Empty the cupboards onto a table. Put away the unrationed foods, such as macaroni, olives, canned milk, chili, home-canned goods, etc.

Then put away the rationed cans or packages which contain less than 8 ounces each. These are mostly small cans of baby food. Then put away five cans or packages for every member of the family, paying no attention to the size or contents of the food. The number of cans or packages left on the table must be reported to the clerk who will issue the ration books during the six days beginning Feb. 22.

There will be 1,500,000 of these clerks stationed in schools, churches and other public places. One adult will register for the whole family. First he will have to show (but keep) his family's sugar-coffee ration books. Coffee stamps will be reducted from books of persons who report that they had more than one pound per adult in the family last Nov. 28.

The clerk will then ask about the number of cans that were left on the table after the Sunday pantry inventory. If there were any left, the clerk will tear out one 8-point stamp for each one.

The books will contain both red and blue stamps. The blue ones are for canned goods, the red ones will be used about a month later for meat rationing.

Each stamp will bear a letter and a number. The letter will indicate when the stamp can be used—A, B and C will be for March.

The figures represent point values, and will be in denominations of 1, 2, 5 and 8. A can that "costs" 10 points, for instance, could be "paid" for with two 5's, A 2 and an 8, or ten ones. Most grocers will mark the point values on the cans or counters right along with the money prices.

Point values may be changed from month to month, but, in general, will be raised and lowered along the same lines as money prices—more points for bigger cans or scarcer commodities.

THE BOY FROM MAINE

CHAPTER XIX

So that was the next two years. The school was in Massachusetts, in the open country—the nearest town was three miles off, and it was only a village. A one-main-street, one-movie village. Boston was seventy miles away. The school was a little world of itself, made of old elm trees and green grass, playing fields and red-brick white-trimmed buildings, Colonial style, with cupolas on top . . . The campus was triangular, and one of its boundaries was a great state highway, and the other two were dirt roads with field grass growing high at the sides. It was a healthy place, and very beautiful.

Rosalie lived with Bailey in two rooms at the end of the ground floor of a dormitory; a tiny living room, an even smaller bedroom, a proportionate bath, all painted in a color she came to think of as dormitory green. The furnishings provided by the school were regulation dormitory furnishings—straight chairs, a battered desk for Bailey, white-iron bedsteads, and two chiffoniers. There was a cot in the living room, over which you put a couch cover, and that was the couch. A former occupant had left some built-in bookshelves, and there was a fireplace . . . Otherwise the little rooms were bleak, for all her decorative efforts. She had stored their New York furniture, and anyway it wouldn't have fitted.

Bailey didn't seem to mind these cheerless quarters in the least. He loved the job, and that was the whole thing. He was himself again. He lived outdoors; he wore the standard shabby tweeds to morning classes, and in the afternoons he was again an athlete in a uniform—and again a hero, a great man in this miniature world. The boys worshipped him. It was funny and rather touching, sometimes, to see the way they trailed him up and down—the smaller figures in the wake of the big figures. They fought to do the menial jobs, to mark the football field with lime, to slave as substitutes on Bailey's teams, for little glory. He was a successful coach; and lucky, as he said himself. The teams were good that year. And as a dormitory master he proved an easy and good-natured disciplinarian, and yet a most effective one—he liked boys and understood them, and he joked them into doing what they must do, and it was only rarely that they gave him any trouble.

Because he was so happy, Rosalie was not too unhappy—on the whole she showed a commendably sporting spirit, all through that first year. She kept remembering that this was only temporary: this was a year off for Bailey. She would try not to spoil it for him, and she did try.

On commencement day she thought, There! She thought it was settled; it was finished; Bailey had got this return to the campus out of his system, and now they could go back to New York and a grown-up life again. . . . The departing boys said, "See you in September, Mrs. Harker," and many of the parents expressed the same assumption, and Rosalie kept affirming them, for diplomacy's sake; but she knew better. All along Bailey had promised her that this would end it, that one year would be enough for him, and that she needn't worry. She still believed him, although it was some time now since the promise had been repeated or renewed. She simply still took it for granted.

The first great quarrel of their lives occurred on the evening of commencement day, when Bailey—looking a little sheepish about it, but resolute nevertheless—revoked the promise, saying that he wanted very much to come back for a second year, and even that he had practically signed up with Andy to do so.

"Without consulting me?" Rosalie said furiously. "How do you know I want to come back? Or I'll put it this way—what on earth makes you think I could endure another year like this one?"

"Oh, now, be fair," he said. "It wasn't as bad as all that." He really seemed rather surprised. "You didn't honestly mind it, did you? Once you got used to it? I thought you got so you even liked it, after a while."

"You never thought any such thing!"

"Yes, I did."

"Just because I tried to be decent about it, for your sake . . . Bailey, listen!" she cried passionately. "Marriage is life for two, not one! There's got to be something I like about the way we live—and I hated this, I tell you! I loathed it. I couldn't stand a second year of it—I'd go stark raving crazy. These wretched little rooms, and the damned bells ringing all day, and no life of our own, and the little petty jealousies among the faculty, and the terrible food in Commons—I want a dining room of my own! And a kitchen!" she concluded, wailing it.

They argued for a long time—or rather, Rosalie argued. Bailey heard her out, saying very little, till the end. He listened with a kind of cool and weary patience, and when he had had enough, he said, "Look here, there's no use in all this talking. You'll live as I have to live—and I like it."

"I will not."

They stared at each other, and Bailey said evenly, "Very well. Then you won't. I agree that there's an alternative for you. This is the way I'm going to live, for another year—but you can suit yourself."

He was coldly angry now. Now the real quarrel began. This was the Bailey she feared and respected—and almost hated—and grudgingly admired. This was the Bailey who had fascinated her from the beginning. As they fought on, she was conscious that in many ways this was an epic battle, that if she lost this one she would lose successive others like it, until in the end she would have no will of her own—she who had been so strong-willed, and so invariably triumphant. It would be a total defeat, and a lasting one, and yet in a curious perverse way she wanted to be defeated, she wanted Bailey to be like this, and to win. The man should be the master. She was completely feminine, and she felt it in her soul.

But she would beat him if she could, and nothing altered that; and in the end she said again, "Bailey, I will not do it. I mean to say, I won't live at this school another year. I'd rather leave you."

That amused him, or it seemed to. He said smilingly, "You'll change your mind."

"What makes you think so?"

He was tired of words. "This," he said merely; and he kissed her until all her breath was gone. Till she stopped beating with her fists against his chest and shoulders and his back. Till she stopped struggling altogether, and began to cry.

Then he said, "There."

So the second year was different, and she wasn't very game about it. . . . She went away a lot, on her own money. In the autumn she spent a month in California with her mother, and in February she went down to Florida alone, and stayed six weeks. That was the winter she discovered that other men no longer bored her; and she was glad of that. That was a weapon, if she needed one.

She thought, I'll show him, and she was not ashamed to see that Bailey was not so happy in the job this year, and that he missed her badly when she was away. She also knew that her behavior was being criticized within the school, that people talked about the change in her, and wondered what was wrong, and resented her long absences for Bailey's sake.

The deciding factor was a circumstance she hadn't planned—in April it appeared that she was going to have a baby. Bailey was overjoyed, and yet subdued about it, being afraid for her. He was considerate and indulgent, to a degree she had never known before. She was wretched in the mornings, and he was immensely sympathetic about that and frightened by it, as thought it were unnatural. An illness shocked and horrified him—he who had never been ill in all his life, except from wounds in war.

And Rosalie saw her opportunity, and it was easy after that. Now they would have to have a kitchen, and a nursery, and a servant—and of course a decent salary, to cover everything. She didn't labor any of these points: she simply mentioned them in passing, as though they were self-evident.

They meant New York again—that was another thing that she presented as a foregone conclusion—and Bailey listened quizzically sometimes, and smiled ironically; but he protested not at all, and it was settled. She had won.

In June, as soon as school was over, he left Rosalie at her parents' house in Boston, and went to New York to get a job—and got one. It was his same old job, in the same brokerage firm. They still wanted Yale fullbacks, and he was still Bailey Harker.

The baby was born in November, prematurely, and it lived two days. This was a grief that Rosalie almost couldn't bear, because it was a boy baby—it was the son for Bailey she had prayed for, all these months. Somehow the loss of it seemed like a judgment upon her.

That was the beginning. Nothing ever went so very well for them again. They had been back in New York for three years now, and they had been married for seven years in all, and Bailey was over thirty, to Rosalie's twenty-six. They both knew that he had changed much more than she had. His waistline had thickened a little—only an inch or two really, but still a little. His face had a city pallor, and sometimes his eyes looked puffy, and his temper was not as good as it had been, and he wasn't as gay; and sometimes, in one of her moments of uncompromising perception and self-accusation, Rosalie knew that she had taken the best of the spirit out of him.

New York was still his poison, but he liked it now. That was the difference. It seemed strange to Rosalie to remember that once this was what she'd wanted—never dreaming that it would work out the way it had. Nowadays she was the one who saw the emptiness of their existence, and Bailey was the one who was content enough with it. Now he liked parties more than she did, and he was drinking far too much—and so was Rosalie herself, though that was mainly to keep up with him. And he was becoming increasingly less discriminating, especially about women.

ART LURES SOLDIERS

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—A new set of "customers," navy blue, denim and khaki clad, are making up for a decline in patronage due to gasoline and tire rationing at the Philadelphia art museum. When travel restriction first were imposed, attendance dropped from 500 to 100 visitors daily, while Sunday averages went from 10,000 to 2,000. Military personnel now comprises about 12 per cent of the museum's visitors.

List of claimants, together with the amounts they received, follows: D. R. Culler, $28; W. W. Doolittle, $30; H. H. Fackler, $22; L. H. Flenner, $12; W. F. Miller, $121; C. C. Oberlin, $11; S. A. Shambaugh, $33; James A. Shea, $30; W. L. Swank, $16.

Found Her--But Too Late

The army corporal found a photograph of a pretty girl in a new York subway train. The corporal Leonard Bender, entered the picture in a contest to find a "Miss Air Force" in New York. The picture won first prize and Bender set out to find the girl, with the hopes of a possible romance. Bender found the girl, Elizabeth Hauser, but he found her six weeks too late. She had been married six weeks ago to Herbert Gould. Anyway, Corporal Bender and Mrs. Gould, both shown above, will attend the premiere of the new movie, "Air Force," which prompted the contest. Mr. Gould, too!

Your Federal Income Tax

NO. 27:

BUSINESS EXPENSE DEDUCTIONS

Expenses deductible in arriving at net profit (or loss) from business or profession (item 9 of return Form 1040) are the normal current costs of running a business or producing income. Such expenses must be distinguished from those incurred for the convenience, comfort, or economy of the individual pursuing the business, or in the nature of loans, gifts, capital investments, and the like. The distinction lies in the purpose and nature of the payment, rather than in any account in which it is charged.

Business expenses may include salaries and wages paid, interest on business indebtedness, taxes on business and business property, loss arising from business operations, bad debts arising from sales or services, depreciation, obsolescence or depletion, and rents, repairs, and other expenses. Other items includible are management expenses, commissions, labor, supplies, advertising or other selling expenses, and insurance premiums.

In the case of a professional man, maintenance and repair expense of an automobile used for professional purposes (or that portion of the expense applicable to professional use) is allowable, as well as membership in technical societies, subscriptions to technical journals and current magazines used in the reception room, cost of supplies, and fees paid to other professional men for professional assistance.

If a professional man uses his residence both as office and home, he may deduct the expense applicable to that part used for professional purposes. Expenses not deductible include the cost of books, and the cost of instruments and equipment having a useful life longer than a year (as these are regarded as capital items on which depreciation may be allowable), and membership dues in a purely social club.

Cost of incidental repairs is deductible provided the property account is not increased by such expenditures, but repairs in the nature of replacements, betterments, and improvements are regarded as capital expenditures and are not deductible.

Persons engaged in business or profession may not claim large and extraordinary deductions for business expenses simply because the earnings of the business have rapidly increased. Payments of management salaries, employees bonuses, and advertisement expenses, and the like, will be carefully scrutinized by the Bureau of Internal Revenue to ascertain whether such expenses are ordinary and necessary in carrying on the business, and if found not to be so, are subject to disallowance.

NAMED TO BOARD

Stanfield Appointed Member of Plumbing Examiners.

Wade Stanfield, 205 Coul street, has been named a member of the Mansfield plumbers' examining board by the city board of health. He replaces Owen A. Eulitz who resigned some time ago to accept employment at a war department ordnance plant in Ohio.

Other members of the board are Otto P. Wervey, 225 West Fifth street, and Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner. Fred Haag, plumbing inspector, is ex officio secretary of the board.

Mansfield's board of health will renew its efforts to suppress the Matthes poultry dressing plant, rear 227 Poplar street, Dr. Wild announced today. Recently a municipal court action was quashed, Judge Kalbfleisch holding the affidavit was too general in its charges and too discriminatory in its application.

New charges, Dr. Wild indicated, will be based on the menace to public health and the nuisance status of the plant due to odors imparted to the neighborhood.

OPEN DRIVE FOR JOB RECRUITS

A recruiting program to obtain general mechanics for employment in the war department in the Dayton area was launched today at the Civil Service commission office in the Mansfield postoffice building.

All single or married men not subject to call because of age, or men in 4F and able to work are acceptable although men over 37 years of age and classified in 3A are preferred, according to George H. Hoover, secretary of the Mansfield office. The minimum age limit is 17.

Positions pay $2,200 a year and an appropriate increase of 20 per cent for overtime. Duties of the workers entail the removal and inspection of tires on automobiles of government employes.

Scores of other positions also remain open. These include positions for accounting and auditing assistants, traffic and transportation specialists, economists and economic analysts and statisticians.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1943.

Interest in "the Flynn case" can now be concentrated on the west coast.

Yes, the groundhog did or didn't see his shadow, and, roughly speaking, there'll be six weeks more of winter.

An observer notes a difference: While many women are welding in factories some others are chiseling on ration rules.

'Borderline Authority' Not Enough

FOURTEEN months after Pearl Harbor "not one pound of synthetic rubber has yet been produced in a government-controlled plant in the United States!"

That is the discouraging revelation made during a congressional committee hearing designed to iron out differences between army and navy officials and Rubber Director Jeffers.

Jeffers has been outspoken in criticism of army and navy interference with production plans and raises the point of whether civilian or military authority should operate the domestic economy during wartime.

Conduct of the war, as well as a large share in determining military needs, are quite obviously matters to be handled by men with military training and experience, but it seems equally apparent that problems of production and distribution should be handled by men qualified by training and experience for those particular tasks.

This was believed to be the intent in making Donald M. Nelson chairman of the War Production Board and placing Mr. Jeffers in charge of rubber conservation and production —but it hasn't worked out that way, and, as Mr. Jeffers puts it: "There has been confusion, clash of personalities, lack of direction, interference, too much expediting, divided authority and too little two-fisted authority."

James F. Byrnes, as director of economic stabilization, seems to be in position of having "the last word" (aside from President Roosevelt), in such situations as have developed in connection with synthetic rubber production, but the whole thing has become so messed up that some senators are now proposing an "economic general staff" to settle disputes over borderline authority.

It is heartening to note that United States participation in the war has succeeded in reaching creditable proportions IN SPITE of all the hindrances already encountered and still interfering with all-out effort.

Vast Army Expansion Planned

HOW LARGE an army does this country need? Recent reports indicate a present strength of about 7,000,000 men in the army, navy, air, marine and other forces, with plans to bring the total strength up to 11,000,000 by the end of this year. Congress, which has seemed hostile to so great an expansion as this, is now reported as yielding to the demands of the expansionists.

The forces contemplated would mean about 8,200,000 men for the army, 2,200,000 for the navy, nearly 200,000 for the coast guard and about 400,000 for the marines. The women's defense organizations known as WAVES and SPARS, now numbering 5,000, are expected to reach nearly 30,000 this year and almost 50,000 by the end of next year.

The vast expansion plans do not proceed without criticism. The critics want to know how the nation can make practical use of as many as 11,000,000 men in this war, in view of the danger and difficulty of getting them across the sea, along with the vast equipment necessary for actual service.

Ohio Budget Hits New High

SPENDING public money, to whatever extent it can be made available from taxpayers, has become so much of a habit that it is probably not surprising to find Governor Bricker presenting a record-breaking budget for consideration by the state legislature.

The governor's budget, totaling $366,028,921, as an approximation of 1943-44 expenditures for the operation of state government, calls for about $22,000,000 more than was spent during the preceding biennium, and contemplates use of the $45,500,000 surplus accumulated during the past four years, so that more can be spent without increasing taxes.

First thought, from a taxpayer's standpoint, might be that instead of increasing expenditures in order to eat up surplus, there might be reduction in the state retail sales tax, or possible elimination of that tax entirely, because of the heavy federal drain on taxpayers to meet war costs.

Making Plans for Kentucky Derby

AMID all the war effort, there still is room for recreation. owners of the big league baseball teams think, and so do the promoters of that turf classic, the Kentucky Derby. The announcement has just been made that, war or no war, the great sporting event will take place at Churchill Downs outside of Louisville on May 1. This will be the 69th Derby, and the hope evidently is that it will not yield in attendance or interest to the other 68.

The Derby has produced some famous horses. Whirlaway, holder of the record for the amount of money won by one horse, is the latest. Before Whirlaway there were such famous winners as Seabiscuit, Gallant Fox and War Admiral. This year may produce another equally notable.

Whether the Derby is worth the amount of money and gasoline it will take, is for the government to say.

Japan's Oversight

THE GERMAN theory of world conquest is said to be based on the teachings of Karl Haushofer, an authority on geography. If the Japanese had paid as much attention to his writings as the Germans are thought to have done, they would be better off. Haushofer wrote about the Japanese ambitions in China:

"Japan has underestimated the immense spaces of China, and will never understand the spirit of modern China. She has not appreciated the greatness of Chiang Kai-shek, symbol of the new China, and the first leader in history to represent the whole nation.

Japan, however, probably begins to appreciate his greatness by this time.

"Save Michigan's Roads," a Detroit newspaper urges—and it's a good idea: they may be needed sometime.

Now they're talking of dehydrating the watermelon—and then what would you have?

IT'S HARD TO TEACH OLD DOGS NEW TRICKS

Stassen Outline World Congress

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

ESTABLISHMENT of the United Nations on a basis of post-war permanancy is considerably discussed in both legislative and executive Washington; maybe by the judiciary also.

Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota did not exactly originate the idea; it had been suggested before he came out in its favor. He has gone into it in detail, however. Originally it was just a hazy kind of a concept. He has given it materiality; has made it a subject for serious consideration. Now he is its outstanding missionary. He proposes an international congress and executive council. It is a concrete plan, as Stassen outlines it. The problem is:

How about Axis acquiescence? To be sure, the Axis is to be licked into unconditional surrender, as agreed on recently by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Casablanca. That they will come into the Union in good faith and voluntarily is more than unlikely. They will be blackjacked in, if at all, and that they ever will prove to have been sincere joiners is extremely improbable.

Governor Stassen doesn't plan to admit them immediately. They will need to be reformed preliminarily, he agrees. This ought to be easy enough with Italy; it simply got, accidentally, into bad company, and may be glad to get out of it. Germany has a suspiciously undesirable past record. Japan is suspect as a temperamental case.

Governor Stassen recognizes that those nationalities will have to be policed indefinitely on into futurity—Italy only tempoharily Germany for quite a spell, and Japan, perhaps, forever. The union of nations would not be very satisfactory, though, with Germany yanked in by the hair of its head and Japan everlastingly a dissenter.

It may mean that the United Nations can keep the others in subjection, but that would not be the all around peace we think we are scrapping for. And yet, how can it be a world-union unless they are included?

THE Italians are a fluke set-up, due to Mussolini. The Germans are pretty chronic, with their kaisers and Hitlers. They have a nice element of folk, but it does not seem to be predomunant. The Japs are queerer. Their rank-and file is o. k., but it is bossed by its dotty military class to such an extent that it is like reckoning with a lunatic asylum.

New another schedule is being boosted for, for the benefit of the Axis-overrun or would-be neutral countries. What will they get out of the final settlement? Maybe a unionized agreement will consolidate them. It is conceded that an amalgamation will be decidedly complicated. Truly old-line democratic countries, like the United States, Britain, France, Italy, the little peewee European groups, the Latin Americans, Spain and Portugal will be easy enough to get together. Also China.

But how about the little countries' respective representations? There may be jealousies. Their united congress may be possible to agree on, with numerical representation. But the presidency? Sentiment will figure among other considerations. How would we like to have a South American world president? This is something like what Governor Stassen envisions. It is a possibility, anyhow. That is, it is logical on the Stassen basis.

The governor's story is that our northern and southern states got together after the Civil war and that now, the same stunt is a possibility on a world-wide bases. Stassen wants to make it a national policy. He is becoming a national character. You hear about him presidentially.

Who's the Hick?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I NEVER KNOW where this column will lead me. And my handsome, suave Bosses refuse to inform me in advance. Personally I bet they've taken out accident insurance on me long since. But you may be sure the accident will be all mine including the cost of mercurochrome.

Take, f'instance, the subjects of these blurbs. If I lean over my harp and tear off a few yards of sweet blues, several thousands of fans immediately indict me for mass production of ga-ga. On the other hand, if I switch the rhythm and make some mean remarks about Churchill or Harry Hopkins, then I'm a leader in the American Fifth Column. Any way you take it, I'm in the dog house. So I've decided to gratify my own impulses for once, come what may, and discuss Us Hicks' reaction to the recent "Farm Mobilization Day" palaver.

James F. Byrnes, recently appointed Director of Economic Stabilization, read the speech, aided and abetted by a lot of Admirals and Generals who never even saw a potted geranium, much less 500 acres of virgin timber land. And I must say, Jimmy, it's unworthy of your record.

You've been a grand member of our supreme judiciary. But that doesn't imply that the rest of us have nothing but woodsticks behind our ears. And I think it's time that someone told you that plenty of us would have been much more grateful if you had given us the oil you handed out on said "Farm Mobilization" in the form of fuel instead of oratory.

Take me 'n' my neighbors in the California Sierra f'instance. We're plain farmers and ranchers mostly, grazing our cattle over the foothills, depending upon the big central valley of the Sacramento and San Joaquin for most of our "green vittals."

Our climate and produce may differ somewhat from that in the south, middle west and east, but we're all just rangers, of one sort or another. And we all listened mighty eagerly to those "Farm Mobilization" effusions. I might add that, generally speaking, we were chewing straw while we listened. And we're still chewing.

Didn't we appreciate all those lovely remarks about the big record we turned out last year? Of course we did. But we also remember that we had a heap of husky young men to help us turn out those crops. But we haven't got them now. No sir, you boys in Washington came along and shaved 'em off cleaner than any safety razor. Yes, I know, there's a war going on. And a big-hearted Lend Lease program. And I'm a patriot.

BUT FEEDING FOLKS IS AS MUCH A PART OF WAR OR LEND LEASE AS PRODUCING GUNS OR PLANES. AND HOW ARE YOU GOING TO FEED FOLKS IF YOU CAN'T GO THROUGH THE NECESSARY MANEUVERS?

You've forgotten that you met me once, Jimmy. That time when you out-bluffed me on a couple of deuces. Smart work, Big Boy. But you can't bluff carrots or cabbages or calves on a couple of deuces. Crops don't rain spontaneous out of heaven like manna. There isn't an American farmer or rancher who wouldn't give the limit in war defense if he had the makings. And he wouldn't whine about hours or wages either. But he has to have the makings.

HE HAS TO HAVE THE MAN POWER . . . THE MACHINERY . . . THE SOIL.

There's soil aplenty. If we haven't machinery we can borrow or share. But you can't borrow or share if the government strips the district clean of husky youngsters and leaves you the cripples and burnt-outs.

And all this oratorical oil is no substitute for a little far seeing common sense. So if you're going to be a director of economic stabilization, Jimmy, for Pete's sake, start stabilizing. Get down to the dirt roots and feel how they function. Or you and all the rest of us will be eating radishes when we need artichokes and short ribs.

P. S.—Don't you remember me even yet? I was the gal on your left. The blond.

Interpreting the War News

Renewed Assurance of Allied Aid Block Axis Path Through Turkey

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S conference with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey puts the final seal on the security of the Allied position in the Middle East.

There was a time, less than a year ago, when this position was gravely menaced. The Axis army was within striking distance of Alexandria and Cairo. The German menace from the north through the Caucasus was real.

If Turkey at that juncture had not held to her alliance with Great Britain, in spite of heavy German pressure and veiled threats, the course of the war might have been changed.

Turkey held firm, however, in spite of Britain's inability to carry out fully her promises of material aid to enable the Turks to defend themselves against aggression. Ankara realized it was not bad faith on Britain's part, but her need for every available weapon to resist the Axis steam roller elsewhere.

While keeping Turkey in line, Britain had built up the 10th army in Iran and Iraq, which was in itself a form of assurance to the Turks that they would not be without help in case of invasion.

By this latest cementing of the British-Turkish alliance, plus the staggering Russian military victories and the smashing of Rommel's army in North Africa, the Axis path to the east has been defectively barred, probably permanently.

Thus is ended another Hitler dream, that of effecting a junction with the Japanese through the Middle East and destroying the British empire.

Turkey's position as a non-belligerent ally of the United Nations has been assured, and there was a hint that her place in post-war Europe had been given consideration at the Churchill-Inonu conversations.

Military and supply problems probably occupied first place in the conversations. High officers of the British and Turkish staffs attended and an official communique said that "agreement was reached on the manner in which Great Britain and the United States would be able to help Turkey materially to consolidate her own general defensive security."

WHILE declining to make any prophecies, Churchill exuded confidence on his return to Cairo from his visit to Turkey. He did utter one sentence which might be construed to indicate his belief that the Tunisian campaign, although a hard one, might possibly be decided in weeks instead of months. Churchill said:

"There (in Tunisia) we must expect considerable fighting in the next months, or weeks, and for my part I have confidence in the result."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The capital in wartime:

When the Norwegian embassy sponsored the world premiere of the picture, "The Commandos Strike at Dawn," attending press agents thought it would be a good stunt to get a picture of Ambassador and Mrs. Wilhelm Munthe de Morganstierne arriving by bus in accord with the ban on pleasure driving. The ambassador and his lady were agreeable.

But the picture almost didn't get taken. There were so many diplomatic cars and taxis unloading in the vicinity of the Interior Department Auditorium that the ambassador's bus couldn't get in close to the loading zone. Photographers almost missed the shot. The ones who got it just stepped into the lanes of traffic with that hit-me-if-you-dare look.

There was no way of checking on how many guests arrived by public conveyance or shank's mare, but two we know came by the latter method. They were Interior Secretary and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes. Confusion over driving regulations for the event arose because diplomats and their staffs didn't know whether the picture was entertainment or educational.

ONE government wartime official here is such an inveterate morning coffee drinker that he has for twenty years consumed before and during breakfast a six-cup pot.

Meeting his wife on the street the other day, I brought up the subject and supposed that by now coffee rationing had brought her husband to the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"Oh no," she said. "We fixed it. The four children and I gave up coffee for the duration. We figured it was either that or receive a notice as next of kin."

THE members of congress have finally been classified as essential war workers. The National Housing Administration had to designate the members as essential to winning the war before they could move into new homes. It's a War Production Board order that new homes built with private funds have to be sold or leased to essential war workers. (Otherwise no priorities on materials).

The new members of congress particularly have been in an awful stew about getting located. There were no apartments, no houses and hotel rooms for only limited periods. Not being considered essential war workers, they were barred from buying or leasing new homes built with private funds and there is a standing rule that congressmen cannot live in houses or apartments financed with government funds. Several finally sent their families home.

Dave Boone Says:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is back in America and the country is grateful. But it's a little worried, too. It's the old question: "How're you gonna keep a president down on the job after he's gone hemispheric that way?"

It was gallant, exciting, epochal and tradition-busting. It stirred the world. But the president shouldn't risk his neck that way. There ought to be a "keep Roosevelt on the ground commission."

It's going to be a hard thing to do. Franklin is back on the job and we understand he finds the United States a mighty interesting, beautiful place, but he can't help missing all the thrill and glamor of whizzing from continent to continent.

Just being at a desk and back where all he can look down on are congressmen, dollar-a-year men, administrators and native politicians must be awful boresome. He could avoid hearing a lot of that jabber over in Africa because of the different tongues, but in Washington he's up against the monotony of understanding everything he hears.

Welcome home, Mr. President, and make yourself comfortable. We want this to be a nice, long visit.

Health and Diet

Vitamins as Medicine

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ORIGINALLY the vitamins were used in medical treatment as a part of diet. It was found that some persons were eating largely processed food, such as candy and crackers and canned goods, from which in the course of manufacture the vitamins had been removed. Consequently these patients showed symptoms of neuritis or scuffy skin or sore tongue or dropsy, and the natural form of treatment was to give oranges and yeast and oatmeal and fresh meat and tomatoes so that general health would be improved. It was replacement therapy. It is still used.

Then the question arose whether a given individual was getting not vitamins, but enough vitamins. He had minor symptoms of vitamin deficiency, either because he had indigestion or diarrhea, and wasn't absorbing his due quantity of vitamins even if they were in the food. Then began the era of concentrated vitamins in pill form.

You could get one single vitamin or you could get the whole catalogue just to make sure. And that is still going on. In fact, there are more vitamins sold in the United States today than there are cathartics.

New Developments.

What I am talking about is an entirely new development. It is the idea that vitamins may act not alone like foods, but like drugs. They may exert actions on special tissues that will cause the tissue to change in a certain process—say degeneration—and reverse the process and regenerate.

The most famous example and the best for illustration was the nervous disease named amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. It is the disease Lou Gehrig had. Now no one in the highest flight of imagination ever supposed he didn't get the right kind of food. If he didn't, why didn't all the other members at the training table get the same disease?

They all ate the most scientific diet possible to devise. So it occurred to Dr. Wechsler, of New York, since one part of vitamin E — tocopherol — has powerful action on nerve tissue, it might work in this otherwise incurable disease. It did not work in Lou Gehrig's case, as we know. But the general principle of treatment might still have some virtue.

Action of Vitamin D.

Vitamin D, as we know, has powerful action on bones. So it is natural that it should be used in arthritis. The main action of vitamin D is to increase the utilization of calcium and phosphorus. One form of arthritis is notable for the lack of calcium and phosphorus in the bones. Hence the logic of its use, at least theoretically. Farley reports good practical results.

In senile patients, also, who have poor digestion and absorbability, concentrated vitamin extracts have been used with some success. They did not, naturally, stop the process of the senile changes, but it was possible to improve some senile changes that appeared prematurely and to halt the progress of mental, heart and muscular deterioration.

In the nervous changes that occur in anemia, vitamin B has been used on account of its special action on nervous tissue.

A Farmer's Diary

Two Mothers

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IN A CITY grocery, I heard two women talking. "Yes, Lydia," said the one who wore a fine fur coat and a tilted dab of hat, "Johnny's gone to an army camp, down in Texas. For twenty years we've tried to make him happy—you see, he was all we had.

"No, he didn't enlist, because he couldn't quite decide which branch he'd better join. Now he's just a private, but he's only been gone a month. I guess everything would seem pretty new for the first few weeks.

"In his letter today, he mentioned the weather being ideal down there. Says the food is good, and he's glad for his Scouting and his athletic training. Spoke of the soft bed at home—we never knew he'd noticed—even asked about the cat, and the neighbor's little boy. . . How's Sam getting along, Lydia?"

Lydia was a colored woman, in a neat plain coat with a bright plaid kerchief tied over her hair.

"We haven't heard a thing since he went to Africa," she said: "Sam makes a swell soldier, I do b'lieve! He started out a private, too, but just before he left he said he'd got promoted—he told what rank he had, but I jes don't remember—somehow Mis' May, that Sam was rarin' to go. He had a bad knee, he got playin' football, and he was scared to death it'd keep him from passin' his physical—but he come home smilin' and said he guessed he'd passed and went whistlin' and singin' all over the house.

"My how he likes army life! The finest vittles anyone ever et. Why, he gained six pounds in six weeks and never felt or looked better in his born life. I'm just afeard if he comes back home, he'll get homesick for the army!

"He didn't get no furlough before he went overseas—we didn't know just why. I hope, for your sake, Johnny gets one—and don't you worry, he'll make you proud when you lay eyes on him again! Tell Johnny I sent him my best, when you write to him—sure, I'll give your regards to Sam. If you need me for anything, just give us a ring. I'm busy, but I'll help you out."

REPORT SHOWS SHARP DROP IN INFANT DEATHS

Five-Year Decline of 18.9 Shown In Figures; Birth Rate Up 9.8.

Mansfield's infant mortality rate has declined 18.9 per thousand population since 1938 and its birth rate has increased 9.8 per thousand in the same five-year period, Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, announced in his annual report today.

Death rates in nearly all age groups reflected declines in 1942, with the one-to-10-year age division showing 9.3 per cent as compared to 9.6 per cent for the preceding year. In the over-65 group the 229 Mansfield deaths represent 50.4 per 100,000 population while from 45 to 64 the rate was 27.9; 35-44 was 6.2 per cent; 25-34 was 3.1; 15-24 was 2.4; and in the 10-14 group only 4.

An all-time high record was set by 1942 births with 1,173 babies born and not one mother died of childbirth causes, Dr. Wild said. The infant mortality of 31 deaths after delivery represents only 26.4 per thousand.

"These figures show in most eloquent language why we should feel proud of our district from a health standpoint," the commissioner said.

"As the most sensational item we direct attention to the mother mortality rate which is zero," Wild's report points out. "The fact that we lost no mother from puerperal causes during the year is a most praiseworthy accomplishment. This is particularly significant in view of the scarlet fever outbreak in General hospital maternity ward last February, and in view of the fact that the birth rate of the city shows a steady increase over a five-year period with a sharp rise last year of 2.2 per 1,000 population over that of 1941

Infant deaths showed a marked decrease in 1942, from 37 to 31, reflecting the fact that mothers are receiving better pre-natal care resulting in healthier mothers and babies. The still-birth rate showed a slight increase last year over 1940 but pre-natal care and instruction will remedy this situation, Dr Wild declares.

Births were fairly evenly divided between boys and girls, disputing the old theory that a "war year" brings a preponderance of boys. Of the 1,173 births there were 610 boys and 563 girls.

Increased use of the well baby clinic is stressed in the annual report, together with the introduction of a better equipped dental clinic.

Immunization programs were carried out on larger scales last year. The only near epidemic was the typhoid fever outbreak in the Ontario region last fall. Dr. Wild reported. Better facilities have been provided and a wider range of operation opened in combating venereal disease, the report says, the commissioner recommending an isolation home for communicable diseases, including social diseases, to strengthen the health department's war against such maladies.

No deaths resulted from communicable diseases last year although 249 cases of varying nature were treated.

In the fight against tuberculosis 15 clinics were held in cooperation with the Richland county tuberculosis association. It is held that present facilities afford an earlier contact with suspected or actual cases.

In school hygiene nurses made 5,834 inspections, 1,588 physical examinations, 690 home visits, 564 admissions to nursing service, and 2,138 defects corrected in 4,689 children found suffering of defects.

In the field of general sanitation progress was reported in 1942, with current demands for a wider weed-cutting program, improvement in the city's garbage disposal system and other methods of eliminating germ-aiding insects.

Inspection of food handling establishments and handlers of food increased during the year.

Among the birds she described were pelicans, herons, scarlet ibis, crocodile birds, parrots, macaw and cockatoos.

The second part of her paper dealt with the methods employed in making clothes, drugs, food and shelter from plants and trees of Africa, South America, West Indies, China and Central America.

Mrs. Valmore described in an interesting manner the McKee jungle gardens in Florida, telling of their abundance of orchids, azaleas, gardenias and hibiscus. She told the group that 2,000 separate species have been introduced into this realm of nature such as African oil palms, sugar palms, manna, coffee, tea, rubber, cinnamon and vanilla vines.

The historical background of South America was outlined by Mrs Parkinson during her talk on "What South America Means to Us." She described the ancient Indian of civilization, and the Spanish colonial feudal system which retarded advancement, pointing out that people of the United States have always been self-governed, while the South Americans were under Spanish rule for 300 years

She discussed the misconceptions residents of North America have regarding Latin American countries and people, stating that "instability in the countries is due largely to the high percentage of mixed peoples."

"The Germans, Japanese and Italians constitute the problem of international importance," she said. She analyzed the international problems arising from the German infiltration and occupation.
